

The Editorial Board of the Canadian Historical Review is pleased to announce the winner of the CHR Prize for the best article published in the journal in the year 2009.

Mary Ellen Kelm

“Manly Contests: Rodeo Masculinities at the Calgary Stampede”

(Canadian Historical Review Volume 90, Issue 4, December 2009)

The CHR Prize is awarded to the best article published in the journal in the previous volume year, as selected by the Advisory Board and the editors. The winner is announced in the March issue of the journal, and he or she receives a prize of $250 worth of books published by University of Toronto Press.

To access the 2009 prize winning article or any of the previous winners, please visit CHR ONLINE (<http://utpjournals.metapress.com/content/120322/>).

Previous prize winners include:

2008— Bruce Curtis “The ‘Most Splendid Pageant Ever Seen’: Grandeur, the Domestic, and Condescension in Lord Durham's Political Theatre”

2007—Sean Kheraj, “Restoring Nature: Ecology, Memory, and the Storm History of Vancouver's Stanley Park”

2006— Lianne McTavish, “Learning to See in New Brunswick, 1862-1929”

2005—Graham Carr, “Rules of Engagement: Public History and the Drama of Legitimation”

2004—John F. Varty, “On Protein, Prairie Wheat, and Good Bread: Rationalizing Technologies and the Canadian State, 1912-1935”

2003—Karen Jones, “Never Cry Wolf: Science, Sentiment, and the Literary Rehabilitation of Canis Lupus”

2002—Carolyn Podruchny, “Baptizing Novices: Ritual Moments among French Canadian Voyageurs in the Montreal Fur Trade, 1780-1821”

2001—Catharine Anne Wilson, “Reciprocal Work Bees and the Meaning of Neighbourhood”

For submission information, please visit www.utpjournals.com/chr or contact Canadian Historical Review

University of Toronto Press — Journals Division
5201 Dufferin St., Toronto, ON,
Canada M3H 5T8

Tel: (416) 667-7810 Fax: (416) 667-7881

Fax Toll Free in North America 1-800-221-9985

email: chr@utpress.utoronto.ca

CHR ONLINE

The CHR was launched in 1920 as a continuation of the Review of Historical Publications Relating to Canada, whose first volume appeared in 1897 and covered books published in 1896 and 1895. One of the earliest essays in the Review is a scathing reading of William Kingsford's The History of Canada, Volume VIII, documenting the fact that careless scholarship and questionable writing skills existed even in those days. Early CHR articles are equally interesting, with titles such as "The Growth of Canadian National Feeling" (W.S. Wallace), "A Plea for a Canadian National Library" (Lawrence J. Burpee), "The Forty-Ninth Degree of North Latitude as an International Boundary, 1719 – The Origin of an Idea" (Max Savelle), and "Volstead Violated – Prohibition as a Factor in Canadian-American Relations" (Richard N. Kottman).

The Canadian Historical Review

Among the Western nations that have played a substantive role in the making of twentieth-century history, Canada enjoys the questionable distinction of being perhaps the least known. Yet there are good reasons for everyone, Canadians included, to know more about Canada's history. Good reasons that are apparent to regular readers of The Canadian Historical Review.

CHR offers an analysis of the ideas, people, and events that have moulded Canadian society and institutions into their present state. Canada's past is examined from a vast and multicultural perspective to provide a thorough assessment of all influences.

As a source for penetrating, authoritative scholarship, giving the sort of in-depth background necessary to understand the course of daily events both for Canadians themselves and for those with an interest in the nation's affairs, the CHR is without rival.

The Canadian Historical Review provides comprehensive reviews of books to interest all levels of Canadian historians. Each issue also offers an extensive bibliography of recently published historical writings (including CD and video media) in all areas of Canadian history, conveniently arranged by subject.